Dear Sponsors, Friends and Fans,

Last Friday morning, my teammates and I departed for Finland. Thirty hours, 5 airports, and many airplane breakfasts later, we arrived safe and sound at Hotel Julie.

Having been here before, it is not unfamiliar, though a very different world. The 9 hour time change takes some getting used to, and it is dark by 3pm.

On Thursday at 11:30 I will race my first World Cup individual. Already since I arrived, I seem to have a flock of ever-present butterflies travelling with me everywhere I go. Two days before my start things are only picking up in intensity. There are skis to be tested (luckily they are all rockets to start off with- thanks to Salomon), courses to ski, equipment to be checked.

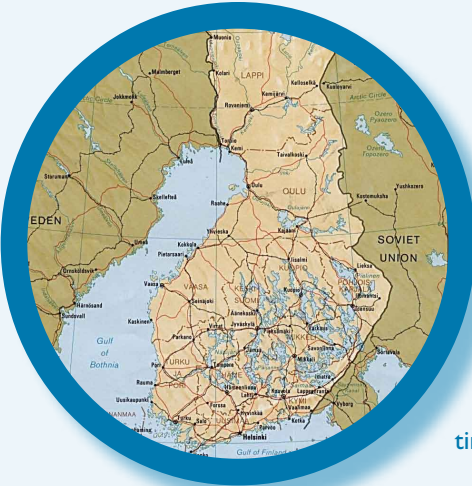

I am lucky enough to be traveling with a super team. My coach and wax techs are great, and we have the added bonus of a massage therapist who is also a yoga instructor. Thanks to Tracy, daily hotel-hallway yoga with the British and Czech teams is becoming the norm!

My first WC race will be a big event- tv cameras and fans are not the norm in Canmore, but it all comes down to having a solid training base under my belt and belief in myself when I stand on the start line. Having these two items with me, gives me the confidence to take on the best in the world, and to learn from them as my World Cup career begins.

Thanks to all my sponsors and to my friends and fans for their support!
